

About The Symposium

To provide accessibility to all, there is no cost to attendees.

The 2023 Weitzman Institute Virtual Symposium provides a unique opportunity to hear from some of the nation's top thought leaders, researchers, clinicians, and entrepreneurs who are leading efforts in the Institute's key priority areas: Social Determinants of Health, Health Systems Transformation, and Workforce Development.

This year's Symposium theme, "Tackling Old Problems with New Solutions in Primary Care," recognizes that pressing issues that have recently garnered increasing attention, including mental health, community violence and trauma, diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI), and big data, are longstanding, wicked challenges that require trans-disciplinary, patient- and community-affirming approaches to drive positive and sustainable change.

The Symposium offers a forum for exploring primary care's challenge of dismantling persistent inequities and recreating and advocating for a more just healthcare system that better meets the needs of its workforce, patients, and communities, particularly those most in need.
